Ensenyat invites American Indians to Majorca

Miquel Ensenyat, the president of the Council of Majorca, met representatives of American Indian tribes from California who were in Washington to protest against the canonisation of Father Junipero Serra.

At the meeting, in addition to Ensenyat, were Antonio Gonzalez, representative of the American Indian Movement to the United Nations, Valentin Lopez, president of the Amah Mutsun Tribal Band, Donna Schindler, an expert in social trauma, and Christine Grabowski, an anthropologist who specialises in American Indian genealogy. The representatives of the American Indian Movement expressed to Ensenyat their rejection of the canonisation of Father Junipero and his vision of the mission. which they consider to have been an invasion that ended their culture, their economic model and their self-government, and which at the same time introduced discrimination that exists to this day.

Ensenyat took the opportunity to invite them to Majorca and to explain their point of view in order to enrich the vision of the missionary, "a figure who can be revised, just as any other, but without losing sight of his importance and the time when he lived."
