Princess has denied any wrong-doing.

Princess decides not to appeal a court summons to testify in Palma

- Lawyers deny charges, say princess has 'nothing to hide.'

- It is the first time a member of Spain's royal family will testify as the subject of criminal proceedings since King Juan Carlos came out of exile to reclaim the throne after the end of the Francisco Franco dictatorship in 1975.

- "Her Royal Highness has decided to renounce her right to appeal ... and to appear voluntarily before the judge..."
