Nurse infected with Ebola in Spain cleared of disease

● A Spanish nurse infected with Ebola in Madrid while caring for a priest who later died of the virus has been cleared of the deadly disease after testing negative two times in a row, doctors said yesterday.

"We consider her cured of the Ebola virus by World Health Organization criteria," said Jose Ramon Arribas, doctor at the Carlos III Hospital in Madrid where the nurse is being treated.

Teresa Romero, 44, was diagnosed with Ebola two weeks ago, becoming the first person to catch the disease outside West Africa in the current outbreak which has killed thousands in Liberia, Sierra Leone and Guinea.

The infection in a high-security ward caused re-cremations in Spain.
