THE FACE OF MAGALLUF IS CHANGING

“The British police have been well received...”

- The central government, local authorities, security services and the community have welcomed the officers.
- Ambassador “proud” of the relationship between Spain and the UK.

Palma.—The British Ambassador to Spain, Simon Manley, yesterday officially presented the two members of the British police who are taking part in a pilot scheme in Majorca this week and Ibiza next week.

They were given a warm welcome by the central Government Delegate to the Balearics, Teresa Palmer and the Colonel Chief of the Guardia Civil in the Balearics, Jaime Barcelo.

The scheme aims to further reduce the number of young Britons who get into trouble whilst holidaying in two of the UK’s most popular overseas destinations and who then require assistance from the local British Consulate.
