Spanish emigration hits highest level since 2008

THE number of Spanish nationals moving abroad rose last year to its highest level since comparable figures began in 2008, the National Statistics Institute said yesterday, with many travelling to Britain, where they now face an uncertain future following last week's vote for Britain to leave the EU. Almost 100,000 of the country's citizens left in 2015 with one in eight moving to Britain, 10 percent to France, 9.6 percent to Germany and 9.3 percent to the United States. Britons last week voted to leave the European Union after "Brexit" campaigners said freedom of movement laws in the bloc had allowed an unsustainable number of EU citizens to move to Britain. See Inside
