MADRID. Spanish police yesterday arrested two Moroccan citizens suspected of being fully integrated into the Islamic State jihadist group and preparing to launch attacks in Spain.

The arrests were made early in Madrid and in Roda de Ter, a town near Barcelona, according to the Interior Ministry.

The two suspects allegedly joined the IS voluntarily and obediently followed the instructions issued by the militant group's command structure.

Both men allegedly used the internet and social media to radicalise and eventually recruit new adherents to the jihadist cause while organised in independent, but coordinated, terrorist cells, the ministry said.

Since 2015, 163 people accused of being jihadist terrorists in Spain.
