Hathaway Majorca film delayed

Palma.—A remake of Dirty Rotten Scoundrels starring Anne Hathaway which was partly filmed on Majorca earlier this year, will now not hit cinema screens until next year. Called Hustle, the film was scheduled to be released on 10 August, 2018 however it was pulled forward to 29 June, 2018 but later pushed back to 10 May, 2019.

CATALAN LEADERS

Moved nearer home

● Spain's government will move jailed Catalan separatist leaders to prisons in their home region, as it pursues efforts to take the heat out of a bitter political face-off that has destabilised the country. The detention of nine former members of the regional government over their involvement in an independence referendum has been a powerful source of grievance.

TV DETECTIVE SERIES MALLORCA FILES GOES GLOBAL

Palma.—The BBC detective series Mallorca Files is being snapped up by international television stations even though filming is not expected to start on the island until November.

The Mallorca Files, is set amongst the expat community and features a British and German detective clashing over their very different approaches to policing the island. German cash has already been secured for the 10 part series and it will be shown on German TV and now French TV also, along with BBC1. Majorca is set to have some golden promotion across Europe and even further afield because other international TV companies have shown an interest in the series. So far details of the cast and even the director have not been revealed, Mallorca Files will be one of the biggest TV series to be film on the island with an audience measured in many millions.
