MAJORCA ON STORM ALERT FOR TODAY

PALMA. Parts of Majorca are on amber alert today for storms and heavy rain, similar to the torrential downpour which soaked Palma yesterday afternoon and forced air traffic control to delay some flights for safety reasons. And the heavy rain caused a bar awning to give way with one person being taken to hospital.

The Aemet agency has issued the warning as from twelve o'clock midday for the north, north-east and interior.

Rainfall is forecast to be forty litres per square metre in one hour and will be accompanied by hail.

For the rest of the island, the rainfall is expected to be half this.

Further rain is possible tomorrow.

The outlook is much better from Sunday, with highs of around 34C forecast by Wednesday.
