BREXIT DEAL REACHED OVER GIBRALTAR

B RITAIN has reached a deal with the Spanish government over the future status of Gibraltar once Britain leaves the European Union, Prime Minister Theresa May said in parliament yesterday.

The government of Gibraltar has said that they have made no concessions to Spain to reach the deal although Gibraltar airport could be jointly managed by Britain and Spain and also the Brexit deal could also protect the fishing rights of Spanish fishermen in Gibraltar. May said yesterday say that 95 percent of Britain's Brexit deal has been agreed but repeated her opposition to a European Union proposal for the Irish border, a major stumbling block, as criticism within her party grows.

Facing some of the fiercest attacks to date over her Brexit plans after again failing to clinch a deal at an EU summit last week, May tried to calm passions in parliament where her strategy has angered eurosceptics and EU supporters alike.

Ryanair passenger's racist rant prompts British police investigation

B ritish police are investigating after footage of a man shouting racist abuse at an elderly black woman on a Ryanair flight went viral over the weekend, with the airline facing criticism over how it dealt with the incident.

The unidentified man insulted her after complaining that she had inconvenienced him as he tried to reach his seat aboard.

"Don't talk to me in a f foreign language you stupid ugly cow," the man tells the woman before a man in the row behind asks him to stop.

"I will carry on as long as I can with this ugly bl bas*," he retorts.

Ryanair said that they were aware of the matter and had reported it to the police. The airline's chief financial officer declined to comment on the story.

"Essex Police takes prejudice-based crime seriously and we want all incidents to be reported. We are working closely with Ryanair and the Spanish authorities on the investigation," the police said in a statement.

The video was taken by another passenger while the plane was waiting to take off from Barcelona to London Stansted airport on Friday.

After the argument, the woman was eventually moved from her seat. A flight attendant appears to tell the man he will discuss the incident with his supervisor, but the passenger is left in his place.
