Far-right party wins seats in Andalusia, a first in Spain

● Spain's far-right Vox party won 12 seats in an election in Andalusia on Sunday and could end up as a kingmaker in the region, in the first electoral success for the far-right since the country's return to democracy in the late 1970s. Page 18 and 19.

Prime Minister May says ahead of Brexit vote, I will still have a job in two weeks

London.—British Prime Minister Theresa May said she would still be in her job in two weeks time, downplaying speculation that she might resign if she loses a key Brexit vote in parliament which is scheduled for 11 Dec.
“I will still have a job in two weeks’ time,” May said in an interview with

ITV television when asked if she would quit if she lost the vote.

“My job is making sure that we do what the public asked us to: we leave the EU but we do it in a way that’s good for them.” May also said there would be no changes to the Brexit plan she has hammered out with other EU leaders.

NEW BLOW FOR PM

“Contempt of parliament...”

● Britain’s opposition Labour Party said Prime Minister Theresa May’s government could face contempt of parliament action after only publishing yesterday a summary of the legal advice received on her Brexit deal with the European Union.

The advice is at the centre of a parliamentary battle, with the opposition Labour Party accusing the government of failing to comply with a legally binding vote last month.
