FARAGE WINS: INSIDE

The re-elected Mayor of Calvia, Alfonso Rodriguez, reading a copy of our election day second edition which appeared yesterday. It was a great night for the Spanish Socialist Party across Spain. Above, re-elected European Member of Parliament for the Balearics, Rosa Estaras, visited our offices in central Palma to collect a copy of our second edition and pose for a Bulletin team photo.

A NEW DAWN

● The Balearics were firmly in the control of the Spanish Socialist Party (PSOE) yesterday after the local elections on Sunday.

● Francina Armengol is in a good position to reform her coalition Balearic government but this time the PSOE are in the driving seat following their surge in support, while her coalition partners saw their share of the vote fall.

● The socialists also retained some key councils including Calvia where Mayor Alfonso Rodriguez was returned to office for another four years.

● It was a bad night for the centre right Partido Popular who were outvoted for the first time by the PSOE although they did take some key councils including Soller and Andratx.

● The right wing Vox party will enter the Balearic parliament with three MPs and will also have four councillors on the Palma city council. See Inside Today.
