"HELP US"

Britain's Thomas Cook Group Plc has approached the UK government for a bailout in an attempt to save itself from collapse after its lenders threatened to pull out of a proposed rescue deal, the Financial Times reported late on Friday night.

The move comes after the British travel firm's stakeholders requested an extra 200 million pounds ($250 million) in talks to finalise the restructuring plan. The company, which employs about 21,000 people, was locked in talks with "multiple" potential investors, including the government, to provide the additional 200 million pounds, the FT reported citing two people briefed on the situation. "We do not speculate on the financial situation of individual businesses," a spokesperson for Britain's Department for Transport said in a statement. Inside

Labour deputy leader says Brexit stance behind effort to oust him from party

London.—The deputy leader of Britain's main opposition Labour Party said yesterday that his stance on Brexit, where he backs a second referendum before a parliamentary election, unlike leader Jeremy Corbyn, is behind efforts by some in the party to remove him. Just over a month before Britain is due to leave the European Union, it still remains unclear whether, how or if Brexit will take place on Oct. 31, amid deep divisions within both the ruling Conservatives and the Labour Party.
