Spanish police intercept suspected drug sub off Galicia

Spanish police intercepted a submarine that appeared to be transporting drugs in waters off the northwestern region of Galicia on Sunday, a source with the central government's delegation to the region told Reuters. "Early this morning an international operation was able to locate a small submarine of around 20 metres near the beach of Hio in the province of Pontevedra," the source said, confirming earlier media reports yesterday. News agency EFE reported that the vessel was carrying some 3,000 kilograms of cocaine, citing sources from Spain's Guardia Civil.

However, the source told Reuters that while the submarine appeared to be carrying drugs it had not yet been confirmed and a spokeswoman for the Guardia Civil said she could not confirm the submarine's cargo as it was still under water.
