“STRANDED” BUT HAPPY

Isabelle and Robert Foird came to Majorca last month to spring-clean their flat in Santa Ponsa....and six weeks later they are still here after at least five cancelled flights. But they say that they are perfectly happy and congratulate the local authorities on their actions.

BACK TO WORK

● The construction sector across Spain and other industries in Catalonia and the Basque Country went back to work yesterday after the government eased one of the world's toughest coronavirus lockdowns as the pace of new infections slowed. However, with the overnight death toll edging up further beyond 500, some frontline workers have joined the head of the Catalan regional government in questioning if the curbs were being lifted too soon.
