Spain's virus death tally lowest in weeks, but economy tanks

● Spain recorded its lowest daily coronavirus death tally in six weeks yesterday, but data showing the economy shrank by the widest margin on record in the first three months of the year laid bare the heavy cost of measures to control the outbreak.

Spain has had one of the world's worst outbreaks with more than 24,000 COVID-19 fatalities and in mid-March imposed one of the strictest lockdowns, though officials are confident the worst has passed and want to start easing measures next week. Inside
