WE WISH YOU WERE HERE

● Britain scraps 14 quarantine period which means that British tourists could be heading to the island very soon.

● Britain will ditch a 14-day quarantine period for people arriving from countries it deems to be lower risk for COVID-19, the government said.

● Official travel advice against all but essential travel outside Britain will also be eased for some countries and regions. Taken together, these changes will make it easier for Britons to travel abroad for summer holidays.

● The relaxations are the latest taken by the government to unwind emergency measures put in place to stop the spread of COVID-19, as ministers look to limit the economic damage caused by the virus.
