

Majorca Daily Bulletin

Friday, February 12 2021

1.20€ · Founded 1962 · N.17449 · Passeig de Mallorca 9 A, Palma 07011

“I don’t know who she is and I don’t want to know,” says Nadal after obscene gesture

Censored

Sydney.—I don’t know who she is and I don’t want to know,” said Majorcan ace Rafa Nadal after a woman in the crowd made an obscene gesture at the Manacor World Number 2. She was later removed by security staff.
See Sports

Participate

Do you think bars and restaurants should be allowed to reopen?

Yes: 79.73%

No: 17.57%

Maybe: 2.7%

Bulletin online poll.,

Basque province ruling lifts spirits of Majorcan bar and restaurant staff

Palma.—Bars and restaurants in the Balearics were given fresh hope yesterday after a court in the Basque Country overturned the lockdown order issued by the Basque regional government.

Provinces across the country, including the Balearics, are planning similar legal challenges and looking for a similar outcome because a legal precedent has now been set.

The Balearic government has ordered that bars and restaurants should remain closed until the end of the month which has resulted in a wave of protests especially as the number of cases of the coronavirus in Majorca continues to fall. The Basque Country, like the Balearics is in Phase 4, but a judge ruled that as long as social distancing was maintained and the curfew respected, then they could open.

The news was met with “drinks all round” in Basque Country bars.....

British government “doing everything” to ensure that Britons can go on holiday

London.—The British government said yesterday morning that they are doing everything they can to ensure that Britons can enjoy a holiday this summer.

Following the introduction of tougher border restrictions for UK nationals returning from abroad and the continuing lockdown restrictions, the government had faced questions about whether summer holidays might be possible.

Health Secretary Matt Hancock said that they were working around the clock to ensure that Britons could enjoy a break and he said that he had booked his summer holiday to Cornwall. But Transport Secretary Grant Shapps this week urged Britons not to book holidays, while Prime Minister Boris Johnson has said it is “too early for people to be certain about what we will be able to do this summer”. Shapps’ call was branded as “puerile and nonsensical” by a senior travel industry professional.

Do you think you will come on holiday to Mallorca this year?

Yes: 59.08%

No: 27.69%

Maybe: 13.23%

Fall in the number of Covid cases in the Balearics: See Page Three