Health secretary quits after breaking COVID rules by kissing aide

London.—Britain's health minister Matt Hancock has resigned after he admitted breaking COVID-19 guidance by kissing and embracing an aide in his office, angering colleagues and the public during lockdown.

Downing Street last night published Hancock's resignation letter to Boris Johnson and the prime minister's response, in which he said he was sorry to receive it. "We have worked so hard as a country to fight the pandemic," Hancock said in the letter. "The last thing I would want is for my private life to distract attention from the single-minded focus that is leading us out of this crisis."

Palm,a.—Majorca can expect a big influx of British tourists over the coming days as a Bulletin online survey stated that 75 percent of those who took part in the poll said that they would be coming to the island now it had been placed on the British government's Green List for safe travel. British tour firms have reported a surge in holiday bookings to the Balearics over the last 48 hours. It is hoped that the island will enjoy a better than expected holiday season now that Britons are allowed to travel. But local officials were quick to point out yesterday that the Balearics were on a watch list so any rise in cases will lead to a change to amber in Britain's travel traffic light.
