A RED HOT WEEKEND

● Stifling. This is what the weather will be like in Mallorca over the next few days as the heatwave will intensify before the end of the week with very high temperatures on Saturday and Sunday.

Palma.— On Saturday, the heat wave will intensify as temperatures will rise. Minimums will not drop below between 20 and 25 degrees Celsius, so nights will be tropical or torrid and sleeping will be difficult.

Highs will range between 34 and 40 degrees. Everything points to the activation of the orange heat-warning for the interior and the north and north-east of the island. Sunday will be even worse, as nighttime temperatures will not drop below 22 to 24 degrees and daytime temperatures will reach between 34 and 41 degrees. It could therefore be the hottest day so far this summer.

On Monday, temperatures will begin to drop, although it will still be necessary to activate the yellow heat warnings. By Tuesday, the longest heat wave since records have been kept could come to an end.
