STARMER SOLLER STORM

Starmer: Soller holiday.

Palma.—Labour leader Sir Keir Starmer flew into a major political row when he flew home from a short family holiday in Soller this week. Starmer had criticised Prime Minister Boris Johnson and other senior cabinet members for going on holiday in the middle of a cost-of-living crisis in Britain, but then he was photographed with his family at a beachside hotel in Soller.

However, he remained unrepentant, telling the BBC: “I’ve also got another job that’s really important, and that is I’m a dad, and I’m not going to apologise for going on holiday with my wife and kids. It’s the first time we’ve had a real holiday for about three years.” But his words were not enough to stop the tabloid storm.

“Not a Keir in the world: Keir Starmer enjoys Mallorca getaway after Labour slams Tories for taking holidays during cost of living crisis,” said The Sun.

The newspaper in an editorial said: “Strikes, drought, massive energy bills, a broken NHS and a looming recession. Anyone could be forgiven for fleeing the country for a bit of a break. You might have thought Sir Keir Starmer would hang around to stick up for the little people during this epic cost-of-living crisis

“Instead, the only plate he’s stepped up to this week was full of patatas bravas as he checked out the Costa living in Mallorca.”
