Filming for series 6 of The Crown continues in Mallorca. Series 5, also partly filmed on the island, is in the news for all the wrong reasons. PHOTOS: JOAN LLADO.

Palma.—The fifth season of The Crown has still not been screened but criticism is already rife, forcing the series creator to defend the show’s handling of historical matters before it has even hit screens. Scenes for Season 5 were filmed on the island last year with Dominic West playing Prince Charles and Elizabeth Debicki playing Princess Diana.

According to The Guardian, former British prime minister John Major has called the forthcoming season “a barrel-load of nonsense” after learning of a potential plot line that could show Prince Charles’s alleged attempt to oust the Queen through secret rendezvous with the prime minister.

Broadcaster and friend of the King, Jonathan Dimbleby, has described the entire series as “full of nonsense” and the latest season as “nonsense on stilts”.

Even Dame Judy Dench has called The Crown “cruelly unjust” in its representation of the royals. Writing an open letter to The Times, she urged Netflix to add a disclaimer at the beginning of each episode indicating the show is a fictionalised account of historical events.

Season 6 of the series is being filmed on the island at the moment with Princess Diana’s relationship with Dodi Al Fayed in the spotlight. See Page two and three.
