WE WANT YOUR VOTE

NEW PASEO MARITIMO STARTS TO TAKE SHAPE: SEE PAGE 10 AND 11

Palma.—The countdown to the local elections in the Balearics is well under way with pollsters saying that the result is too close to call.

The centre-right Partido Popular (PP), which could form the next Balearic government and rule key councils cross the island, is targeting the so-called foreign vote and has organised a rally in Palma for this month in English. The Mallorcan nationalists, Mes, are also holding a meeting for non-Spanish voters in Palma.

“The PP, through its President in the Balearic Islands, Marga Prohens, with the presence of its candidates for the Town Councils of Palma, Calviá and Andratx, plus the candidate for the Council of Mallorca, wish to make themselves known to the foreign international community in Mallorca and inform about the steps to follow to be able to exercise the right to vote in the next Municipal Elections on 28.05.23. The presentation will be held in English. Meeting date: 09.01.23, Meeting time: 6pm, Meeting Place: Restaurant Varadero - Palma. Please confirm attendance by email to: balearics@pp.es...” the Partido Popular said in a statement.

Mes in their statement said that “voting was a right” and they would be holding a meeting with foreign voters also on January 9 at 7pm at the l’Espai Suscultura in Palma.

Every vote could prove vital, with thousands of foreign citizens, including Britons, being able to vote in council elections. In Calvia, Andratx and even Palma, the foreign vote could prove vital.

The Balearics are at present ruled by a left-wing coalition led by the Spanish Socialist Party (PSOE).
