NADAL PULLS OUT OF FRENCH OPEN, NEXT YEAR TO BE HIS LAST

Manacor.—Speaking in Manacor yesterday afternoon, Mallorcan tennis legend Rafa Nadal told the international press that he will not be playing this year's French Open, a tournament he has won a record 14 times, due to the hip injury he picked up at the Australian Open at the start of the year. Nadal has never missed the French Open since winning the title there when he made his debut in 2005.

The Mallorcan explained that he has been training hard but has not managed to reach the physical and mental levels to compete in Paris, so he is going to take the next few months off to concentrate on getting back in condition. He hopes to return to tennis before the end of the year, even play the Davis Cup, and to be on top form to be in action next year, which he admitted will probably be his last, although he added that one can never predict the future. But that is his and his team's plan of action for the moment.
