Madrid.— Spain's parliament voted to make Pedro Sanchez prime minister for another term yesterday, ending a protracted deadlock after an inconclusive general election in July. His Spanish Socialist Workers' Party (PSOE) reached separate deals with a number of regional parties to earn their backing, including a contentious bill on amnesty for Catalan separatists that has sparked protests across Spain. Sanchez had 179 votes in favour and 171 against, with no abstentions. See Pages 4-5
